An exciting tour by 4x4 through the jungles of Tahiti's interior. A list of luxury resorts, budget and dormitory accommodations. Calendar of events for 2003. Weird tales of tikis that kill when moved. Sex and the Tahitian vahine past and present. Flying saucers that use caves in the hills for their hangers. Austin Peterson is a TV-radio writer/producer who has worked for Young and Rubicam, Ted Bates, ABC TV, NBC Radio, the Advertising Council, and Family Theater Productions. During World War II he served as a major and as Head of Production for the Armed Forces Radio Service. In 1944, he visited all the AFRS stations in the Pacific: Honolulu, Johnston Island, Kwajalein, Eniwetok, Saipan, Guam, Tinian, Leyte, Manila (arrived there by mistake while there were still 15,000 Japanese behind the wall), Lingayan Gulf, Palau, Biak, the Admiralties, Guadalcanal, Espiritu Santo, New Guinea, and New Caledonia. That four-month trip whetted his appetite for travel and in 1960 he started writing travel guides for Pan Am on Tahiti and Her islands, Fiji, American and Western Samoa, and the Manu a Islands. Tahiti Report 2003 is his third book on Tahiti in the past three years.

This guide book contained some helpful information about Moorea & Tahiti, but not much. It's rambling and not well-organized, with numerous typos which make it appear to be not well prepared or thought out. It seems dated.

This book was a complete waste of time and money. It appears to be a vanity book - this guy wrote about some stuff that interested him and then paid to have the book published. There are typos galore - a completely unprofessional job by the publisher.
