Having both the REA and Spark Chart German Grammar cards at my disposal, I find myself reaching for the Spark card first every time. I have tried to use the REA card but find the Spark laid out better and more useful. The Spark Chart card contains 6 pages of German Grammar information vs. 4 on the REA cards. Both cover the same basic ground nouns, pronouns articles, adjectives, prepositions, and verbs, but the Spark Card also includes a full page on word order and conjunctions - two subjects absent from the REA card. The REA card devotes half a page to Alphabet and Sounds, whereas Sparks ignores these. The difference between Spark and REA really comes down to Spark giving more examples and detailed information than the REA card for the areas they both cover. If I had to have only one, it would not be the REA card. Opt for SparkChart German Grammar if you can find it.

This was an important help in my quest to learn German.

Excellent resource for new learners. It is very concise and has the right amount of details.
